

Considering the Future

What's happening in the changing world around us plays directly into our career decisions, strategies, and success. Do you know where the university is heading? Do you know the vision for your unit? Before you go further in the career process it's important to understand the future of the organization and the business trends that are driving the future. Try meeting with a small group of peers and collectively answer the following questions:

- The most significant change seen in higher education is:
- At Ohio State we are currently focused on:
- In our unit/department we are currently focused on:
- What is the mission of the unit/department and how does it align with Ohio State's mission?
- Is the unit/department changing drastically? Why or why not? How?
- How will our positions and roles need to evolve to continue to be effective and relevant?
- What are some of the best practices in our field that other universities are engaging in?
- What is the future of _____?
